ANGIOSCAN II™
QUANTITATIVE DOPPLER SPECTRUM ANALYSIS

In clinical studies, ANGIOSCAN II™ has been shown to reliably locate and classify carotid stenosis ranging in severity from occlusion to mild lesions of less than 30% diameter reduction, including smooth and ulcerated plaques. Occlusion is distinguished from severe stenosis, while different vessel types such as external versus internal carotid arteries are clearly identified.

At a site when an evaluation of the stenotic lesion is desired averaged values of the peak, mean, mode and percent window are automatically calculated. These parameters, especially peak and percent window (a quantitative measure of spectral broadening) can be used to infer lesion degree.

ANGIOSCAN II™ has been demonstrated to be an effective pre-angiography screen, reducing the incidence of unnecessary negative angiograms.

ANGIOSCAN II™ greatly enhances the accuracy, diagnostic quality and speed of carotid or cardiac exams using CW or pulsed doppler imaging B mode systems.
